

2024 Post-Election Outlook and Analysis

Friends and Colleagues-

President-elect Donald Trump declared victory overnight after convincing wins in Georgia, North Carolina and Pennsylvania; further electoral gains this morning could preview a true red wave this cycle, pending results in additional House races. Senate Republicans secured a clear majority, successfully defending incumbents and gaining at least three additional seats with victories in Montana, Ohio and West Virginia. Several key Senate races that will determine Republicans' final margin of control in the chamber remain too close to call this morning.

As expected, it may take days or weeks to officially determine control of the House next session. The fate of the House will determine the full slate of powers available to Republicans—chief among them: whether they can use budget reconciliation to enact legislation next year. Budget reconciliation is an invaluable tool, and its viability is particularly compelling as Washington prepares for expansive negotiations on tax policy, including the expiring provisions of the Tax Cuts and Jobs Act. Governing dynamics will differ notably in a Republican trifecta scenario versus continued divided government, but the incoming administration is expected to move swiftly to freeze and potentially rollback various Biden-era rulemakings regardless of congressional makeup.

While Republican control of the Senate is assured, the conference must convene next week to decide on a new era of leadership in the chamber. Longtime party leader Mitch McConnell (R-KY) will pass the baton to a successor—and soon-to-be majority leader—determined by his members. In any scenario, the Senate agenda will feature a steady stream agency of appointees and judicial nominees, mixed with proposals that aim to reduce federal spending, roll back regulatory burdens, enhance border security and curb the influence of China, among other priorities. A Republican House would coalesce around similar policy goals, but a Democratic House could focus heavily on oversight of the new administration.

As ever, Brownstein maintains strong ties to leaders on both sides of the aisle and the incoming administration, with multiple former Trump administration officials among our ranks. Please read on for key race results and our analysis of the lame duck session and leadership in the 119th Congress.

Looking Forward: Lame-Duck Agenda

The House and Senate return to session on Nov. 12, beginning the final stretch of the 118th Congress. In the remaining weeks, lawmakers must balance preparing for the 119th Congress with addressing the few remaining must-pass legislative items, including the annual National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) and the expiration of government funding. There are also several notable programs and authorizations set to expire at year-end that may ultimately be addressed in conjunction with government funding, such as health care extenders and the Farm Bill. These priority items will consume much of the available floor time, and the potential for delayed election results could further complicate matters. Other pieces of legislation with bipartisan support could still advance independently or with one of the moving vehicles, but the field of contenders is relatively small.

Must-Pass Items – The following measures must be addressed before the conclusion of the 118th Congress to provide stable funding broadly for the U.S. government and security measures.

- Government Funding – In September, the House and Senate passed a three-month continuing resolution (CR) until Dec. 20, giving lawmakers five session weeks post-election to prepare a full-year government funding package or resort to another CR. The current CR is a “clean” extension of fiscal year (FY) 2024 funding, with only a few exceptions and modifications for technical budgetary issues and certain extensions and authorities, such as increased funding for the Secret Service. Before recessing in October, the House passed only four of the 12 appropriations bills and the Senate failed to pass any. The bills considered by both Appropriations committees also adhere to the topline allocations set forth under the Fiscal Responsibility Act (FRA) of $1.606 trillion. However, the House did not include side deals in topline funding allocations, whereas the Senate provided additional emergency funding for nondefense and defense programs beyond FRA levels. A bicameral agreement on topline totals will take up a significant portion of time during lame duck. Chamber leadership is also striking different notes; Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY) said that the bipartisan CR vote would set the tone for constructive work on government funding, but House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) has vowed that there will not be an end-of-year “Christmas omnibus,” indicating Congress could pass a series of minibuses and/or another CR into February or March 2025. Any solution is expected to play host to a range of expiring authorizations and potentially some narrow bipartisan policy proposals.
- National Defense Authorization Act (NDAA) – Congress has passed the NDAA every year since 1961, and that streak will continue this year. The FY 2025 NDAA is currently in the conference process to resolve differences between the House and Senate versions of the bill. The House passed (217-199) its version of the FY25 NDAA in June. The Senate Armed Services Committee (SASC) released an executive summary of its FY25 NDAA in June, followed by bill text in July. The bill has not been considered by the full Senate, but committee leaders filed a manager’s package in September that included 93 amendments agreed to on a bipartisan basis by SASC leadership and, together with the SASC’s executive summary, is being used as the Senate’s conferencing position to the House bill. The most significant difference between the two bills is SASC’s bipartisan amendment to add $25 billion to the authorization, resulting in the SASC bill’s topline reaching $923.3 billion in defense discretionary spending, while the House’s bill is $895.2 billion. The SASC version of the FY25 NDAA also takes a notably different approach to several key issues in the House version, including reproductive care, diversity and climate change. Beyond the toplines, conferees will have to manage numerous partisan provisions included in the House-passed bill to secure bicameral support and ultimate passage. It is anticipated that all items will be conferenced, and the bill will be posted during the last week of November, followed by House passage the first week of December and Senate passage the second week of December.

Expiring Programs and Authorizations – Should Congress adjourn without enacting extensions of the following items, there would be repercussions for various agencies, programs and businesses, especially relating to agriculture, nutrition and health care programs.

Brownstein

- Health Care Extenders – Funding for several health care programs is set to expire by Dec. 31, including funding for Community Health Centers (CHCs), the National Health Service Corps, the No Surprises Act Implementation Fund, the Special Diabetes Program and teaching health centers that operate graduate medical education (GME) programs. Additional notable programs that expire at the end of the year include the Medicaid Disproportionate Share Hospital (DSH) allotment reduction delay, Medicare Inpatient Prospective Payment System (IPPS) adjustment for low-volume hospitals, the Medicare-dependent hospital (MDH) program, Acute Hospital Care at Home waivers and work geographic adjustments under the Medicare physician fee schedule. There is bipartisan, bicameral interest in Congress to ensure these health care extenders do not lapse in funding and are included in an end-of-year package. Bipartisan House members are pushing to include language in a package protecting physicians from proposed Medicare payment cuts in 2025. Telehealth flexibilities for Medicare beneficiaries are also set to expire on Dec. 31. These flexibilities were created during the COVID-19 pandemic and extended for two years post-pandemic. This includes reimbursement for telehealth services in any geographic area, allowing patients to remain in their homes for telehealth visits and delivering telehealth using audio-only technology if a patient cannot use both audio and video, among other flexibilities. Multiple committees have already proposed bipartisan legislation to extend telehealth coverage for at least two years or make it permanent, which will likely be reconciled and addressed.
- Farm Bill – The Farm Bill governs and reauthorizes numerous agricultural and food programs and is typically renewed every five years. The most recent Farm Bill was passed in 2018. In November 2023, Congress enacted a one-year extension through Sept. 30, though many key programs are funded through the end of the year. This includes crop insurance and other vital programs such as the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program (SNAP), which were funded by the CR through Dec. 20. Senate Agriculture, Nutrition and Forestry Committee Chairwoman Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) and Ranking Member John Boozman (R-MT) released competing Farm Bill frameworks in May and June, respectively, but no legislative text has been published. House Agriculture Committee Chairman G.T. Thompson (R-PA) introduced and advanced a Farm Bill (H.R. 8467) in May, primarily along party lines (33-21). Reauthorizing the Farm Bill will require overcoming partisan differences, especially related to commodity programs, crop insurance, conservation, nutrition assistance and reference prices. House Agriculture Committee Ranking Member David Scott (D-GA) has stated that he and other leaders are still pressing for a Farm Bill deal; Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) previously tried to add a one-year extension of the Farm Bill to the House Republican CR, but Chairman Thompson objected, maintaining that he sees a path to a full bill this year. Staff-level negotiations continued during the October recess, and committee leadership in both chambers are facing renewed pressure to secure a deal before year-end.
- Additional Programs in Limbo – The current CR also included a limited number of temporary extensions, which expire on Dec. 20. For example, the CR provided an extension of the Federal Emergency Management Agency's (FEMA) National Flood Insurance Program (NFIP). Unless Congress reauthorizes the program, the authority to provide new flood insurance contracts will expire, and the authority for NFIP to borrow funds from the Department of the Treasury will be reduced from approximately $30 billion to $1 billion, which would require FEMA to adjust and pay claims instead through the National Flood Insurance Fund (NFIF) or reserve funds. The Temporary Assistance for Needy Families (TANF) extension also expires on Dec. 20, which provides federal grants to states to offer income support and services to help families achieve economic self-sufficiency. Other extensions expiring on Dec. 20 include the U.S. Parole Commission, EBT benefit fraud prevention and other programs operated by the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and Department of Veterans Affairs.

Other Policy Priorities – Many stand-alone measures are being readied for possible floor consideration or floated as potential additions to a government funding package or NDAA. Although the outcome of the election, procedural obstacles and limited remaining floor time will hinder their progression, some priorities could make it across the finish line at the end of the year.

Brownstein

- Pharmacy Benefit Manager (PBM) Transparency – Several key congressional committees have passed bipartisan legislation aimed at increasing transparency for PBMs to reduce overall health care costs. Although there has been no reconciliation between chambers, lawmakers are pushing for PBM reform to be included in an end-of-year package as a pay-for to offset the cost of other policies. The House passed the Lower Costs, More Transparency Act (H.R. 5378) by a 320-71 vote under suspension of the rules in December. The bill would require PBMs to semiannually provide employer-sponsored health plans with data on prescription drug spending, ensure that PBMs contracting with Medicaid managed care organizations (MCOs) are prohibited from spread pricing, require Medicare Advantage (MA) organizations to report to HHS information on providers, PBMs and pharmacies they share ownership with, require the Medicare Payment Advisory Committee (MedPAC) to study and report on vertical integration among PBMs and enhance requirements for PBMs to disclose their compensation to plan fiduciaries, among other provisions. The Senate has yet to pass its own PBM bill on the floor, but the Senate Finance Committee advanced the bipartisan Better Mental Health Care, Lower-Cost Drugs and Extenders Act (S. 3430) and Modernizing and Ensuring PBM Accountability Act (S. 2973) out of committee. The Senate Health, Education, Labor and Pensions (HELP) Committee also advanced the bipartisan Pharmacy Benefit Manager Reform Act (S. 1339).
- China's Influence – In September, the House held a long-awaited “China Week” to vote on legislation targeting aspects of the U.S.-China relationship. The bills addressed national security, economic relations, technology, the pharmaceutical industry and other key sectors. The most notable bills voted on were the BIOSECURE Act (H.R. 8333) and the ROUTERS Act (H.R. 7589), in addition to the Countering CCP Drones Act (H.R. 2864) and the Protecting American Agriculture from Foreign Adversaries Act (H.R. 9456). The BIOSECURE Act bans five China-based biotech companies, and potentially other biotech companies from countries of concern, from operating in the United States and from contracting with the federal government, with exceptions. The ROUTERS Act would require the Department of Commerce to conduct a study of the national security risks posed by routers, modems or devices that are designed, developed, manufactured or supplied by China, among other countries. Most of the bills passed in an overwhelming bipartisan effort, highlighting support for increasing U.S. capabilities to counter the threat posed by the Chinese Communist Party (CCP). Some of the bills, particularly the BIOSECURE Act or ROUTERS Act, may be taken up by the Senate or attached to the NDAA.
- De Minimis Exemption – The de minimis threshold allows duty-free entry to products valued at $800 or less. Congress remains interested in combatting the significant increase in the number of shipments entering the United States claiming the de minimis exemption. China-founded e-commerce platforms and other foreign companies may be taking advantage of de minimis treatment to import low-cost retail items and unsafe products into the United States. In April, the House Ways and Means Committee Republicans passed the End China's De Minimis Abuse Act (H.R. 7979), which would end the de minimis exemption for any good subject to Section 301 tariffs. Rep. Earl Blumenauer (D-OR) introduced a competing bipartisan proposal, the Import Security and Fairness Act (H.R. 4148), which aims to exclude China entirely from the de minimis program. A bipartisan group of senators have also announced a compromise bill – the FIGHTING for America Act of 2024. Speaker Johnson continues to build consensus on de minimis reform and hopes to bring legislation to a floor vote during the lame duck session. Senate Finance Committee members have also called for further action to fully address the de minimis exemption, arguing that recent regulatory proposals will be insufficient to stem the flow of illicit products.
- Children's Data Privacy – In July, the Senate passed (91-3) a package targeting children and teen's online privacy protections (S. 2073), which included the much-watched Kids Online Safety Act (KOSA) and Children and Teens' Online Privacy Protection Act (COPPA 2.0). KOSA would provide children and parents with tools, safeguards and transparency to protect against online harms, such as establishing a duty of care mandate for online platforms and requiring them to activate the most protective settings for children by default, and COPPA 2.0 would ban online companies from collecting personal information from users under 17 years old without their consent, among other provisions. The House Energy and Commerce Committee advanced both bills in September; the House version of KOSA notably includes changes to the duty of care section and only applies to “high impact” platforms, but the House COPPA 2.0 text contains fewer changes. Despite lawmakers’ ongoing desire to enact data privacy-focused legislation this Congress, significant hurdles remain to getting the bills over the finish line.

- Digital Assets – House Financial Services Committee Chairman Patrick McHenry (R-NC) maintains that there is an opportunity for cryptocurrency or stablecoin legislation to move in lame duck, but neither effort has a clear path to becoming law. Stablecoin legislation has been the subject of lengthy negotiations between Chairman McHenry and Ranking Member Maxine Waters (D-CA), who recently voiced her support for a “grand bargain,” though a compromise agreement remains elusive. Chairman McHenry’s Financial Innovation and Technology for the 21st Century Act (H.R. 4763) cleared the House in May in a surprisingly bipartisan vote (279-136), but continued opposition from key Senate Democrats makes further progress unlikely.
- Permitting Reform – The Energy Permitting Reform Act of 2024 (S. 4753) advanced (15-4) out of the Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee in July and remains outgoing Chairman Joe Manchin’s (I-WV) top priority. The bill aims to support clean energy projects, as well as traditional resources like oil and gas and mining projects, by streamlining federal permitting processes and providing more certainty for domestic producers. Chairman Manchin will likely make one last push to attach it to a must-pass package, but past attempts were unsuccessful.
- Disaster Relief – The devastation caused by Hurricane Helene and Hurricane Milton has underscored the need for increased disaster relief funding. A potential $10 billion increase to FEMA’s disaster relief fund was left out of the previous CR, which also lacked disaster relief funding for the Small Business Administration (SBA). Lawmakers from impacted states have called for swift action on an emergency aid package to deal with the aftermath of the hurricanes, and Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) and top appropriators pledged to act quickly upon returning to Washington.
- Public Health Programs – Reauthorizations for several public health programs lapsed last year, including the SUPPORT Act and Pandemic and All-Hazards Preparedness Act (PAHPA). Many lawmakers have expressed a desire to include provisions from both in an end-of-year package. The SUPPORT Act (H.R. 4531) passed out of the House in a bipartisan vote 386-37. The bill would reauthorize key programs for patients with substance use disorder and permanently extend required Medicaid coverage for medication-assisted treatments. The Senate HELP Committee also advanced its own reauthorization bill (S. 3393) out of committee with slight differences, such as not permanently extending required Medicaid coverage for medication-assisted treatments. Similarly, the House and Senate have different versions of PAHPA. House Republicans omitted drug shortage provisions in their version (H.R. 4420/H.R. 4421), while the Senate HELP Committee passed a version (S. 2333) containing drug shortage provisions. These host of differences would need to be reconciled for the bills to have a chance at final passage before year-end.
- Artificial Intelligence (AI) – Congress has become increasingly interested in addressing the rise of artificial intelligence (AI), with Senate Majority Leader Schumer (D-NY) calling for extensive legislative efforts around the technology. However, few bills have progressed out of committee and/or been considered by a full chamber. Lawmakers could look to move Senate Commerce Committee bills that were reported out in July related to AI, such as the Future of AI Innovation Act (S. 4178), National Science Foundation AI Education Act (S. 4394) or Small Business AI Training Act (S. 4487). Additionally, the DEFIANCE Act of 2024 (S. 3696), which would stop the proliferation of nonconsensual “deepfakes,” passed the Senate by unanimous consent in July, and the AI Accountability Act (H.R. 3369), which would require a study on AI accountability measures, passed out of the House Energy and Commerce Committee last July. While AI-related provisions may feature in funding measures and NDAA, no standalone movement is likely before year-end.

- Debt Limit – The Fiscal Responsibility Act (FRA) was signed into law in June 2023 and temporarily suspended the debt limit and established statutory discretionary spending limits for FY 2024 and FY 2025 for both defense and non-defense discretionary spending. The FRA included a provision to incentivize Congress to enact regular, full-year appropriations legislation instead of relying on short-term CRs. If discretionary appropriations that exceed a statutory limit for a fiscal year are enacted, a sequester is triggered, making across-the-board reductions to nonexempt spending to eliminate spending above the limit within the applicable category. The FRA suspended the debt limit until Jan. 2, 2025, when it will then reset to the amount of outstanding debt at that time. The Treasury Department would then begin deploying “extraordinary measures,” with the agency projected to exhaust its resources sometime mid-2025. Congress is not expected to act before the end of the year, instead leaving debt limit negotiations to the 119th Congress.
 - Judicial Nominations – Any available floor time during negotiations over legislation will likely be used by Senate Majority Leader Chuck Schumer (D-NY) for the processing of high-priority lifetime positions on Article Three courts.

Leadership in the 119th Congress

U.S. Senate

Senate leadership will undergo some notable shifts next session as Republicans prepare to lead the chamber. On the Republican side, Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) is stepping down from his long-held post as Senate majority leader. As a result, Republican Whip Sen. John Thune (R-SD); former Republican Whip Sen. John Cornyn (R-TX); and Sen. Rick Scott (R-FL) are in the running to become Senate majority leader. Sen. John Barrasso (R-WY), Republican Conference chairman, is running unopposed for the No. 2 position in the conference vacated by Sen. Thune. Continuing the domino effect, Sens. Joni Ernst (R-IA) and Tom Cotton (R-AR) are running to be Republican Conference chair, the third-highest post, and Sen. Shelley Moore Capito (R-WV) is seeking to replace Sen. Ernst as Republican Policy Committee chairwoman.

Less turnover is expected on the Democratic side, where Sen. Chuck Schumer (D-NY) will continue leading the chamber’s Democrats, accompanied by Sen. Dick Durbin (D-IL) as the Democratic whip. However, there are more members of Democratic leadership up for reelection this cycle compared to Republican leadership, including: Sen. Elizabeth Warren (D-MA), vice chairwoman of Conference; Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN), chairwoman of Steering Committee; Sen. Bernie Sanders (I-VT), chairman of Outreach; and Sen. Tammy Baldwin (D-WI), secretary of the Conference. Although most of these members are likely to hold their seats, Sen. Baldwin is in a closely contested race. Democratic leaders that are not up for reelection include Sen. Mark Warner (D-VA), vice chairman of Conference; Sen. Catherine Cortez Masto (D-NV), vice chairwoman of Outreach; Sen. Cory Booker (D-NJ), vice chairman of Policy and Communications Committee; and Sen. Brian Schatz (D-HI), deputy conference secretary. Still, there will be some shuffling among the ranks as Sen. Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) and Sen. Joe Manchin (I-WV), chairwoman and vice chairman of Democratic Policy and Communications Committee (DPCC), did not seek reelection. Sens. Klobuchar and Booker have both announced their intentions to run for the role of chairperson of the DPCC, the No. 3 position in Senate leadership.

U.S. House of Representatives

Shifts in House leadership will also likely be considerable. Current Speaker of the House Mike Johnson (R-LA) will be the natural frontrunner to remain speaker or minority leader, but others in the party may challenge him, including current Republican Leader Steve Scalise (R-LA) and Rep. Jim Jordan (R-OH). Republican Conference Chairwoman Elise Stefanik (R-NY) and Rep. Tom Emmer (R-MN), Republican whip, could remain in their roles or seek elevation depending on the circumstances. Rep. Gary Palmer (R-AL), the Republican Policy Committee chairman, may also maintain some form of leadership position. Republican Steering Committee leaders Reps. Richard Hudson (R-NC) and Blake Moore (R-UT) could also make a bid for Republican leadership.

Brownstein

Potential Democratic control of the House would be expected to yield Minority Leader Hakeem Jeffries (D-NY) as speaker, Whip Katherine Clark (D-MA) as Democratic leader, and Rep. Pete Aguilar (D-CA), current Democratic Caucus chairman, as the new whip. If Republicans control the House, they will retain their current roles. Additional shuffling is also likely among Rep. Ted Lieu (D-CA), Democratic Caucus vice chairman; Rep. Joe Neguse (D-CO), assistant Democratic leader; and the current Democratic Policy and Communications Committee Chairs: Veronica Escobar (D-TX), Debbie Dingell (D-MI), Lori Trahan (D-MA) and Lauren Underwood (D-IL). Reps. Robin Kelly (D-IL) and Sara Jacobs (D-CA) are also reportedly seeking Democratic leadership spots.

Aging	Chair : Bob Casey (D-PA) Ranking : Mike Braun (R-IN)	Sen. Bob Casey (PA)	Sen. Rick Scott (FL)	Sen. Bob Casey (D-PA) is expected to continue leading the committee if re-elected, but his race is currently too close to call. If he were to lose reelection, Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand (D-NY) would likely replace him as the top Democrat. Sen. Mike Braun (R-IN) is retiring, and Sens. Tim Scott (R-SC) and Marco Rubio (R-FL) are expected to lead the Banking and Intelligence committees, leaving Sen. Rick Scott (R-FL) as the next most senior committee member.
Agriculture, Nutrition, and Forestry	Chair : Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) Ranking : John Boozman (R-AR)	Sen. Amy Klobuchar (MN)	Sen. John Boozman (AR)	Sen. Debbie Stabenow (D-MI) is retiring. Sen. Amy Klobuchar (D-MN) is next in line to replace Sen. Stabenow, though she may choose to remain chair of the Rules Committee. That would leave Sen. Michael Bennet (D-CO) as the most senior Democrat. Sen. Mitch McConnell (R-KY) could replace Sen. John Boozman (R-AR) since he is stepping down from leadership and is more senior to Sen. Boozman. However, Sen. McConnell may opt to take over the Defense Appropriations Subcommittee if he does not bump Sen. Susan Collins (R-ME) in the full Appropriations Committee.

¹ Our analysis takes into account Republican committee rules, which state that a senator can serve a cumulative six years as chair, plus six years as ranking member of the same committee. Republican senators who serve six years as a chair are fully term-limited, even if they would otherwise have time remaining as a ranking member.
